

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for electronically constructing three-dimensional images by means of a field of scanning apertures and a two-dimensional high-speed video display device. A display device and an aperture plate are selectively controlled to produce 3-D image reconstruction having both horizontal and vertical viewing angles.